

Washington Ignores Rain to Greet Prince

workers were standing on a baggage truck as the Prince passed, and when they clapped he saluted three times. Perhaps a thought flashed across his mind of the work the Red Cross women were doing one year ago to-day when the Prince, with millions of men in the Allied armies laid down his arms, the war being at an end. In any event he paid particular tribute to the Red Cross uniform on his way through the cheering multitudes.

As the Prince emerged from the station there was a fanfare of trumpets from the waiting cavalry troops, and the United States Marine Band struck up "God Save the King." Every army and navy officer came to attention and saluted, diplomats removed their silk hats and held them against their left breasts. There was not a move by any one until the last note had died out. One of the White House limousines drew up and the Prince, accompanied by Vice-President Marshall, stepped in.

Thousands Line Avenue
Other members of the official party followed in other machines, while one of the crack cavalry troops of the United States army acted as escort, taking the prince and his suite through the Capitol grounds, up Pennsylvania Avenue, past the White House to the home of Perry Belmont in the fashionable Fort Circle district. The rain falling on the backs of the cavalry horses gave the troop the appearance of coming up the avenue in a gray cloud.

Thousands of persons lined the walks of Pennsylvania Avenue, hundreds of them standing without umbrellas to get a glimpse of the prince as he rode by. They cheered him lustily and he courteously showed his appreciation. When the Belmont home had been reached by the cavalry escort the horses were backed up along the curb opposite. Each man drew his saber and held it at present arms, while the prince rode by.

Soon after the prince had alighted and entered the home that is to be his during his three days' stay in Washington, the Vice-President, Cabinet officers, General Pershing and Admiral Grayson took their departure. The prince began wandering around the spacious rooms of the Belmont home, paying particular attention to the old paintings on the wall.

Prince Receives Newspaper Men
A few minutes later it was announced his royal highness would receive the Washington correspondents. He entered the room, smoking a cigarette, and was introduced by one of his aids. He seemed a bit embarrassed and spoke of the weather by way of opening the interview.

"Your royal highness," said one of the correspondents, "one of the Canadian papers states today you are to return to Canada as Governor General of the Dominion."

A broad smile lit up the Prince's face.

"The newspapers know more about me and the things that are in store for me than I do myself," he said with a laugh.

British army officers attached to the party said the report is entirely unfounded and that the Prince intends to visit all the British dominions.

"On leaving Canada," another correspondent suggested, "you were quoted as saying you regretted you could not reply to all the friendly letters you had received from Canadian girls."

"I am the heir apparent of a good nature," he replied.

Following the dinner the Prince visited the National Press Club and held a brief reception. At the club the Prince issued an official greeting to the people of the United States through the press.

The message follows:
"I am very glad to take advantage of the invitation of the National Press Club to send a few words of greeting to the American people on my first arrival in their beautiful capital. It would have been a very great regret to me had the President's illness unhappily prevented me from fulfilling my keen desire to visit the United States this year, and for this personal reason, as well as for much wider ones, I rejoice in his steady improvement."

Praises American Troops
"I know that you gentlemen of the national press are very highly trained critics of public writing and public speech, and I am not at all your equal in that respect, but, happily for me, what I want to say to you is easily said. It is to tell the American people through you with what pleasure I recall my visits to their gallant forces in Europe last winter and how glad I am now to be making acquaintance with the great people from whom those forces came."

"I was able to visit several of your divisions in France and Germany and also the very smart Sixth Battle Squadron which you sent to join the Grand Fleet in the North Sea. The spirit of your soldiers and sailors, officers and men, appealed to me very strongly and I wish to know their country and their kin. The rapidity of your organization, moreover, enabled me to realize with what devotion and what strength this mighty nation can espouse a noble cause."

"Now that I am really here in the United States, I feel that my anticipations will be completely fulfilled. Your institutions, your ways of life, your aims, are as democratic as ours, and the atmosphere in which I find myself is the same invigorating and familiar atmosphere which I have always noticed in my American friends."

Thanks United States for Hospitality
"I thank you, gentlemen of the press, who command so vast a public and who possess such widespread power in the democratic English-speaking world, for offering to be my intermediaries in conveying this short message to your fellow citizens in the United States. I assure you that I deeply appreciate the hospitality of your government in inviting me to pay this visit and in entertaining me so well."

Victory Unites Us, Says Pring

Effect on Our Common Aims Will Be Felt for 100 Years, He Asserts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Responding to a toast by Vice-President Marshall at the dinner at the Belmont home tendered him to-night by the Vice-President, the Prince of Wales said: "I regard it as a great honor, and I am finding it also a great pleasure, to have been invited to pay this first visit to the United States. I wish, indeed, that the President, whose visit to England last year I am so happy to be able to return on behalf of my father, the King, had been with us here to-night. I have followed his illness with the deepest concern, and I associate myself most earnestly with the hope of his fellow countrymen that he may soon be restored to health."

"The United States has recently lost one of its noblest citizens in Theodore Roosevelt, a man, a sportsman and a force. All who knew him feel the poorer for his loss. Your President is revered far beyond this country's shores, and the great world is as deeply affected as his own people by his absence from active political life. I was happy to hear a better report of President Wilson at the White House this afternoon, and hope to see him before I leave Washington."

Canada Shares With U. S.
"This is Armistice Day, and it is indeed a happy coincidence to have been invited to-night to meet the representatives of so many countries which were gallantly allied in the great struggle and gloriously associated in victory. I am particularly glad to be able to greet his excellency the French Ambassador, Monsieur Jusserand, present among the diplomatic representatives accredited to this great capital, just as his country, La France immortelle, was preeminent among the Allies."

"As you know, I have recently been traveling in Canada, and I am the richer since that three months' journey by a wonderful experience. I come here, therefore, not only as an Englishman and as a representative of the British Empire, but also as a Canadian who is as intimately and personally concerned as you yourselves in the life of this North American continent. The British Empire is held together by the common aims and the united sentiment of five sister nations, all of which are devoted to the same cause of democratic self-government. But Canada shares with the United States the splendid territories of this rich continent."

No Physical Barrier
"She is divided from you by no physical barrier, no military line, no frontier other than a boundary guaranteed by international law and good will. North of that frontier we cherish our British institutions, our British form of freedom, our British allegiance to the King. South of it we cherish equally the institutions into which the American citizen is born. The forms are different, but the human aim of both systems of government is the same. "It seems to me that this example of nations living side by side in a spirit of political tolerance and human liberty is entirely incompatible with the militarism which threatened Europe in the great war, and is thus a living example of the great principles for which we gave our best in that terrible ordeal. As the representative here of the British Empire, and also I hope I may say—as a friend and great admirer of the American people, I reflect with pride that our common victory was a victory for the ideal to which we with our institutions and you with yours have given practical shape upon this continent for a hundred years."

Smoot Denies 1,200 English Girls Are Mormon Converts

Story Recently Published Bitterly Denounced by Senator; Colleagues Join in Repudiating Charges

New York Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Declaring he had broken his customary silence regarding the Mormon Church in order to speak as a member of Congress, Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, denied vigorously this afternoon a story printed recently under the pen name of Winifred Graham that 1,200 English girls converts to the Mormon Church were to be sent to this country. The story charged that these girls were to come over to practice polygamy in Utah, and the hope was expressed that the United States would deny them entrance.

"I want the people of the United States to know that so far as the Mormon Church is concerned polygamy is dead and the scandal-mongers will have to find another hobby to ride," said Senator Smoot. "I know of no people who responded more gloriously to the war both in giving of its youth and in pledging its money, than did the members of the Church of Latter Day Saints. I am making this statement of the church of the Mormon Church is importing the English girls at the request of the Salt Lake Commercial Club, three-fourths of whose members are outside the Mormon Church."

Senator Henderson, of Nevada, echoed Senator Smoot's praise of the moral standards and patriotism of the Mormons, saying he knew of a settlement of them in his own state.

Thomas, of Colorado, and Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, also addressed the Senate with praise for the Mormons, supporting Senator Smoot's contention that the proposed migration from England for polygamous purposes was untrue.

O'Malley and Buchler Swap Their City Jobs
Edwin J. O'Malley, former Deputy Commissioner of Public Markets, took office yesterday as Third Deputy Commissioner of Charities, while Rabbi Samuel Buchler, former Third Deputy Commissioner of Charities, was being sworn in as Deputy Commissioner of Public Markets. Mr. O'Malley was ousted from his post in the Markets Department by Dr. Jonathan C. Day, the commissioner. Rabbi Buchler's transfer makes two clergymen in the Markets Department. It is understood Mr. O'Malley will do the purchasing for the Charities Department. He established and conducted the school sales stations, where almost $3,000,000 worth of army foods were sold. He is a resident of Queens and was one of the organizers of the Business Men's League, which backed Mayor, shifting this support later, with Mr. Ryan's consent, to the candidacy of Mayor Ryan.

Rabbi Buchler is chairman of the executive committee of the American Jewish ministers. He attained prominence in February, 1913, when he replied to an attack by Mayor Gaynor on "certain kinds of foreigners." He resigned from the pastorate of the People's Synagogue apparently because of his interest in politics, which was said to have given offence to some of his parishioners. Many of his former flock joined his New People's Synagogue, which he established a short time later.
